Radiological management of metastatic prostate cancer. Advances in the diagnosis and treatment of metastatic prostate cancer have made possible the use of treatment strategies designed to shrink tumour volume and to improve survival. The primary role for treatment is palliation, relief of symptoms, and reduction of pain. Surgical or radiological intervention helps to alleviate symptoms associated with bone metastasis, especially pain and fractures. More than 50% of patients with prostate cancer experience bone metastases. When a patient has bone metastases, the natural course of the disease is to have bone and organ dysfunction, tumour growth, and pain. In addition, prostate cancer commonly involves extraosseous sites such as lymph nodes and lung. Although clinical data can be obtained by these means, the majority of patients with advanced disease will not have distinct clinical symptoms or cancer-related problems. In conclusion, it is important to evaluate patients with bone metastases for the presence of end-stage disease and to determine the appropriate therapeutic modality. The present invention relates to a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device and, more particularly, to a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device which prevents generation of voids when a conductive layer and an interlayer insulation layer are formed on a poly-crystalline silicon layer. FIGS. 6A and 6B are sectional views illustrating a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device of the prior art. A plurality of trench isolation regions 3 are formed in a silicon substrate 2. A silicon oxide film 4 is buried in the trench isolation regions 3. A poly-crystalline silicon layer 5 is formed on the silicon oxide film 4. A conductive layer 6 made of tungsten is formed on the poly-crystalline silicon layer 5. Subsequently, a nitride film 7 is formed on the surface of the conductive layer 6. An opening of the nitride film 7 is filled with a conductive layer 8 made of aluminum, and a surface of the conductive layer 8 is polished. Thereafter, a surface of the poly-crystalline silicon layer 5 is polished, and the surface of the silicon oxide film 4 on which the poly-crystalline silicon layer 5 remains is polished. At this time, a conductive layer 6 is also polished. When a conductive layer is formed on the poly-crystalline silicon layer 5, a void 9 is sometimes generated. As a method for preventing the generation of voids, a method of forming a barrier layer 8a made

Oklahoma State Highway 156 State Highway 156, also known as NM-124, is a state highway in the US state of New Mexico. Its southern terminus is at Interstate 40/US-62 at the Bosque del Apache, and its northern terminus is at NM-125 (Bosque City Road) northeast of Bosque. NM-125 continues north as the Bosque City Road through the Bosque del Apache National Monument. Route description History SH-156 was established in 1939. Originally it ran from the U.S. Route 62 in Portales north to Interstate 40. In 1943, it was extended north to NM-125 via Bosque City. This large-scale, multi-center, prospective clinical study \[[@B2]\] has evaluated the relationship between the consumption of chicken, egg, and fish and the risk of developing acute respiratory tract infections (ARI). A total of 9486 school-age children and 38,352 adults from 30 centers in 8 countries (China, the United States, Brazil, Mexico, India, Costa Rica, the Philippines and Thailand) were enrolled in this study. Children were in daycare centers or preschools, while adults were recruited from outpatient clinics and family practice offices. A nurse or physician examined each participant. Upon enrollment, a standardized questionnaire was used to obtain information regarding demographic characteristics, chicken or fish consumption, and other risk factors for ARI. The results of this study showed that individuals who consumed chicken had a significantly lower incidence of ARI than those who did not consume chicken. The frequency of chicken consumption and the duration of chicken consumption were positively associated with decreased ARI. A reduction in chicken consumption in children had a greater preventive effect on ARI (odds ratio: 0.90) than in adults (odds ratio: 0.95). Similar results were obtained with fish consumption and ARI. However, no significant associations were found between consumption of these foods and pneumonia (lower respiratory tract infections) or influenza
