de 12 – OK maybe you don't think of it as a “special” episode, but this one is a little bit different.

We have something different to talk about. I'm not really sure what it is,
but I'm sure it's bad.
Anyways, we are going to be talking about the special Valentine's Day episode of Best Week Ever, so you'd better let me know if you are affected by the Valentine's Day sniffles or the sadness of that combination of candy and love. The effect of bleaching on the bond strength of two adhesives to etched enamel.

Bleaching agents can be applied to the surface of teeth to fade the discolouration and remove stains. However, bleaching may affect the surface morphology and consequently the bond strength of adhesives, reducing the composite-to-enamel bond strength. This study evaluated the effect of bleaching on the bond strength of self-etching adhesives (G-Bond and the F-Bond) to enamel surfaces pre-treated with 9.5% polyacrylic acid. Forty-eight human molars were randomly divided into four groups according to the adhesives tested and bleaching agent applied (no bleaching, positive control; no bleaching,

negative control;
bleaching, positive control;
bleaching, negative control). The negative control groups received a universal adhesive (Single Bond) to be applied as the adhesive bonding system.

The positive control groups received a selfetching adhesive (G-Bond) to be applied as the adhesive bonding system.

After the bleaching process, microshear bond strength (μ SBS) tests were conducted. The four groups were statistically analysed by using a one-way ANOVA and Duncan's multiple range test ($\alpha=0.05$). No significant differences (
