What's new in Keymacro 1.8.3: - Bugfixes and improvements. Keymacro is a simple and easy to use program that enables you to record keystrokes, mouse actions and screenshots and then transmit that data to your PC from a remote computer, enabling you to see what your users have been doing over the past few hours. Keymacro also enables you to record video of any window on the remote computer. Using an app that costs over $100 to spy on people's activities is un-ethical and this app proves that. So you can keep this kind of software on your phone and try to fool your employer/boss in this way. I would never use something like this to spy on people's activities, I would never be able to hide it from my employer because he would notice it immediately. So I am not even going to use it, because it's unethical and I can't just download it from an app store, no, I would have to get it from a website. Dry sinker vs wet sinker? Hi, I'm a newbe to flyfishing and looking at getting into dry sinkers. I used to use a wing shaped wet sinker in my dry sinker rig. Since then, I've just stuck with a butt dry sinker. I'm not looking to switch to fly lines, but with dry sinkers, I don't feel comfortable using wet sinkers in the rivers I'm planning on fishing. I was wondering if anyone can advise me on the advantages or disadvantages of a dry sinker. I have had some good success with both. I fish with wing shaped wet sinkers mainly. They do not work so well in hard rocks. I did use them to fish the tail drop from last year and it worked well. I can not say anything about use with fly lines because I never fished them. I would start with a butt sinker and learn what works best with you. Once you are comfortable, then look for different shapes. I agree with both of these comments. Every water is different and it would be hard to answer your question as it's going to depend on the type of water, shape of water, how much of a fight for depth, what type of water is it, etc. etc. You might look into a round weighted drop sinker for some of those situations. Also, if you are going to be able to pick up your line, you might be able to pick up a flathead or full weighted 4 to 6 weight drop sinker. I personally like wing shaped as well. I'm not sure of the advantages or disadvantages of a dry sinker. I usually cast around and find a spot. Drop the sinker down and then slowly sink it down. It has the advantage of being able to see where the bite is when the sinker hits bottom. It can also be used to create small pockets of trout where a regular drop would not get down. I like a dry sinker for a few reasons. It's easier to work with on deeper waters
