Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an optical system (image pick-up lens) and an image pick-up apparatus, such as a video camera, an electronic still camera, a digital camera, a TV camera, and a silver-salt camera, including the same. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, there has been an increasing demand for the increased miniaturization and the improved optical performance of optical system, such as video cameras and electronic cameras. Although compact, single lens reflex cameras including interchangeable lenses composed of two or three optical elements have been widely used, an optical system including a single lens element has begun to be used as an optical system included in video cameras and electronic cameras in recent years because of the increased number of electronic components. Patent document 1 discloses a conventional optical system having a single lens element that is a three-element optical system, a first lens element having a negative lens, a second lens element having a meniscus lens, and a third lens element having a positive lens. Patent document 1 discloses that this optical system is favorably corrected for aberrations and has a compact design and a wide field angle. However, the optical system disclosed in Patent document 1 is not favorably corrected for aberrations at the peripheral area of the image plane, and is insufficient in forming an image having high image quality at a wide field angle.A health check for civil servants, whether they are at work or at home, is a good idea. We aren't told just what will be tested for, but presumably it will include alcohol, drugs and sex; their use might be the cause of disability or it might be the main cause of sick-leave.
