You must remember that the other person has feelings, too. It is their brain that has feelings. There is a difference, to be sure, but let's put that aside for a moment. Your brain operates on a different frequency than theirs. No one can prove that fact, but it is true. It is your responsibility to let them know. You don't have to prove your statement. Tell them that it is true. They have to believe it. You must believe it yourself. You must let them know you believe it. You have no right to believe it unless you yourself believe it.
