Previous studies have reported that benzodiazepines enhance the acquisition of a conditioned taste aversion (CTA) in rats. However, in some cases, the same benzodiazepine also facilitates acquisition. The present study was conducted to determine the dose of diazepam (DZ) used to facilitate the acquisition of a CTA (the amount necessary to produce a 0.5-mm shift in the lever-reinforcement association in the experimental animals from the extinction to the post-acquisition phase of the test) as well as the possible mechanisms involved in its action. In experiment 1, adult male Long-Evans rats were pretreated with various doses of DZ (2.5, 5 and 10 mg/kg) or vehicle prior to acquisition training. The dose of DZ that facilitated acquisition was then used to assess the effects of a pretreatment with different doses of DZ (1, 2.5, 5 and 10 mg/kg) on extinction. In experiment 2, rats were pretreated with DZ (10 mg/kg) prior to acquisition training and the effects of other two benzodiazepines (5 and 10 mg/kg) on extinction were assessed. In experiment 3, the rats were pretreated with 5 or 10 mg/kg of DZ prior to acquisition training and the effects on the extinction learning of subsequently trained rats were assessed. In experiment 1, acquisition of the CTA was facilitated by the dose of 10 mg/kg of DZ. Extinction was facilitated by DZ (1, 2.5 and 5 mg/kg) a69d392a70
