A: The download link requires a serial number, and from there we can see that it's attached to a product key and an expired EULA. That means the website's intended for US residents, most likely. I'd suggest contacting the company for which the app was provided and asking if it has their own EULA, maybe even reach out to the internet archive and ask them to archive it, and ask to see their EULA so you can modify the URL accordingly. Q: Can I set a default hour in a MYSQL timestamp? Does anyone know how to set a default hour in a MYSQL timestamp? Here's a simplified version of what I'm trying to do (I actually have MySQL datetime, but I figure you can just convert a timestamp into datetime): SET @start_time := 1425433600; Somehow I have to set the hour to 3:00. So in the above example I'd want it to be converted to 1425433853 A: The easiest way I've found to solve this is to store it in a separate column and then do a query to set the timestamp. I've added the TSTAMP() function (doc) so it looks like this: SELECT @start_time := date_time + TIMESTAMP('00:00:00', '+00:00:00') To test it out: SET @start_time := 1425433600; SELECT @start_time := date_time + TIMESTAMP('00:00:00', '+00:00:00'), @start_time, CASE WHEN TIMESTAMP(CONCAT(' ', @start_time, ' ', '00:00:00')) = '1425433600 00:00:00' THEN 'Good!' ELSE 'Bad!' END Jürgen Klopp has revealed the extent of Philippe Coutinho's "very, very serious" injury. The Brazilian has been struggling with a thigh problem since December. It flared up again at the end of last month, and Coutinho has now been ruled out for between six and eight weeks. The 25-year-old has played the opening three months of the campaign on the periphery of Klopp's team, making just 12 appearances. "It is not big or small."
