Say I have several secrets I need to share with someone securely. Is it more secure to pick one of the secrets, share that one (the key still needs to be split somehow), and share that key with the recipient?

This is the first time I've used JavaScript with asp.net. I'm curious as to what I am missing, and how to use this new object correctly: var myOptions = { success: function (data) { alert("success"); }, error: function (data) { alert("error"); } }; var myRequest = new Ajax.Request("RunScript.aspx/GetTin", myOptions); When I call myRequest.options.success, I get the object with properties in it. My question is, how do I use the object to actually pass a value? In other programming languages, we define a variable like var nameOfVar = function(parameter) and can call it as nameOfVar("parameter"); A: You can use the AjaxRequest class as explained here: AjaxRequest Request = new AjaxRequest("myUrl", options); //... function onXhr() { //... } Request.addEventListener("success", onXhr); Request.addEvent
