The new Lavender is a product of a planned breeding program conducted by the Inventor in Sebring, Fla. The objective of the breeding program is to create new Lavender cultivars with large flowers and attractive leaf and flower coloration. The new Lavender originated from a cross-pollination made by the Inventor in March, 2001, in Sebring, Fla., of the Lavandula stoechas cultivar Encore, disclosed in U.S. Plant Pat. No. 10,774, as the female, or seed, parent with the Lavandula stoechas cultivar Nancy, not patented, as the male, or pollen, parent. The cultivar Sunshine was discovered and selected by the Inventor as a flowering plant within the progeny of the stated cross-pollination in a controlled environment in Sebring, Fla., in March, 2002. Asexual reproduction of the new Lavender by terminal cuttings in a controlled environment in Sebring, Fla. since May, 2002, has shown that the unique features of this new Lavender are stable and reproduced true to type in successive generations. the particles contained in the board-supported, gas-permeable, catalyst-carrying membrane, but also otherwise necessarily far removed from the membrane, which carriers are for example located in a gas-permeable casing and are carried by the casing itself.
