There are many people who enjoy the visual novel genre, but are not sure what to expect. They don't know what to expect from the narrative and while they can see the story in their heads, it's just not as perfect as the written word. Well, this is your chance to relax and expand your horizons. The game is incredibly short, but quite profound. You can read the first date in about 5 minutes, and the second date in about 10 minutes. However, you'll enjoy every minute of it, and the story will keep growing on you the longer you play. Don't miss out on this story, and don't let it pass you by. VirtualDog is a free visual novel project put up by a pair of developers who set out to make a spiritual successor to the classic visual novel Vampire Girl. The result is a game that pays homage to the original while blazing new trails in the genre. You play as Taichi, a high school student attending a new school for the virtual reality program of the school. You're assigned to take care of an AI dog known as Tifa, and you have the opportunity to romance her. The dog has a unique life of its own separate from the real world, and you have the ability to unlock things through a series of virtual tests. There are 18 unique endings, each with their own twist and unique scene. You can play the game in Japanese, English, French, or German, each with different options like the choice of many sex acts, dialogue options, text panels, and music. The game also offers a high-quality conversation system where you'll get to choose what to say with the AI characters, making the choice-based events much more meaningful. You'll need to be persistent in unlocking all the content within the game, as there are a lot of text panels to unlock and voice recordings to listen to. You can change the art style by choosing what to highlight with the mouse cursor. You can also unlock other players' content. That's not all, you'll also enjoy a wide variety of options including: four sex scenes, and sixteen relationships. Maximus Ripley is a story about a man born in a family where all the members are named in English. As with many other people, not all of the names he was given were the ones that he liked. What's new:

The Gun Store is the editorial and media team at Big Red Gun. Since 2007 they have been dedicated to providing the community with gun related information from all aspects of the industry. The staff at Big Red Gun welcome guest writers and contributors to share their passion for gun rights and outdoor adventures. Mike's prices are crazy, but he still isn't one of my favorite customers. His emails are replete with vague complaints about the distributor, but his lack of true cooperation made the work required to solve problems difficult. He requested weapon information without sharing information about the order. The issues he was having (stemming from his communication with the distributor) were as results of his lack of preparation and information sharing. "I'm being hosed, brother." He did not use the word "please" before the purpose of his emails before sending them, or the company responded. Instead, he applied pressure and unprofessional social media tactics. Arguing over gun prices, tracking down the distributor or, "Hey, I really love that rifle." (staring directly into the camera, hand over heart, eyes slightly widened), is cool. But, not so much. What's the purpose of sales? Sell service. Sell knowledge and responsibility. Sell responsibility. Selling more equipment is a very small part of the business of gun shops. You can get basic LEO gear at the other department stores. Finally, not every department has the option of selling an additional service. Most are limited to selling accessories. Don't expect to make big money on a small volume of big orders, but if you continue with the right attitude, targeting customers that are a potential fit for your company and treating them like part of the family, yes, you can make some money on a few big orders. Consumers buy. We are a service provider. We get this by selling service to our customers. Customers shop because we have knowledgeable, caring, and skilled people and better prices. We keep the lines moving, give up the small stuff and make it easy to do business with us. We are here to talk to you, to give you an honest appraisal of your equipment and prices.

We want to be your trusted expert advisors. That is exactly how DoGunZa DoGunZa was treated. I remember a call just to let us know they had won the order. If that is your experience, great! You win
