• Quality: • Speed: • Features: The best features of the software are: This invention relates to apparatus for preventing fishing gear from becoming fouled in use, and more particularly to such apparatus for use with nets which are often permitted to float on the surface of the water to be fished. Consequently, when the net drags in the water, it is common for fouling materials such as weeds, the tentacles of jellyfish, or other debris to become attached to the net. The net will, in time, be so fouled that it will no longer be effective in gathering fish. It will then have to be removed from the water and cleaned. This is a time consuming and laborious process. In some situations it has been necessary to cut away the net before it becomes so fouled. It is therefore an object of the invention to provide a new and improved apparatus for preventing fouling of fishing nets. It is another object of the invention to provide such an apparatus which will be inexpensive to make, and which will be quickly and easily attached to an existing net, without deforming or otherwise modifying the net. It is a further object of the invention to provide such an apparatus which will not become fouled itself. This invention relates generally to gas powered guns and pertains, more specifically, to a gas powered gun having a breech which can be mounted on a table such as at a shooting range or the like and which includes a diverter for the distribution of gas ejected from the casing of the gun from multiple ports provided thereon to the chamber of the chamber of the gun to improve the recoil thereof. The prior art reveals several patents which have been designed to include multi-port breech operating devices for gas powered guns. These include the following U.S. Pat. Nos.: 1,746,907; 1,832,236; 1,848,327; 1,953,310; 3,138,718; 3,553,844; 3,604,096; 3,620,622; and 3,728,058. However, none of the foregoing patents disclose a pump jockey feature which is common to all of these patents in that each provides a diverter for a plurality of gas ejection ports which extend out of the back of the gun, and they fail to disclose a housing which extends around the periphery of the barrel to eliminate the use of a spool within the cylinder.
