"It actually goes a little beyond simply grinding toward higher levels. It provides a sense of progress in the character design that involves a lot more than just hitting the most powerful enemies. The character becomes more powerful, but it also seems to just evolve as an individual as you go through the game." _Play game: more DEVY CUTE: This invention relates generally to dynamic random access memory (DRAM) integrated circuits (ICs), and more particularly, to a method for isolating defective DRAM memory cells. A conventional DRAM comprises a memory cell array, address circuitry, sense amplifiers and input/output circuitry. A row of memory cells in the memory cell array is selected for writing (accessing) by placing the desired row of cells in an activated state and placing the desired memory cells in a selected state. For a write, a column address is also provided to place a selected column of memory cells into the activated state. For a read, a row address is provided to place a selected row of memory cells into the activated state and the sense amplifiers provide input data from the memory cell to the input/output circuitry. The input data is provided to the address circuitry which provides the desired column address based on the data provided by the sense amplifiers. In most cases, some of the memory cells in the DRAM are defective, causing the DRAM to malfunction. In order to repair the defective cells prior to delivery of the DRAM to the customer, an external test is carried out in which all the cells of the DRAM are checked. In this manner, the defective cells can be detected and the defective cells can be replaced by redundant cells of the DRAM. In order to perform such an external testing, the data stored in the memory cells are read and the data is compared to known data to determine the location of the defective cells. The memory cells are then disabled and the redundant cells are enabled. In order to achieve this, a precharge signal is used to precharge the array cells for a sensing operation. For example, as shown in FIG. 1, a precharge signal at a logic level "0" is applied to the memory array during the test mode. All the addressed row lines (e.g., ROW1-ROWn) and column lines (e.g., C1-Cm) are then activated to place the addressed cells into an activated state. If the desired memory cells
