HyperMotion Technology comes with a new Complete Control System, which allows players to analyze every single player's direction of movement and accurately control the movement of the entire team in real-time using the new Player Trajectory System. "The speed and intensity of real-life player movements and the unpredictability of the game have been taken to the next level with the introduction of HyperMotion Technology," said Peter Rydell, FIFA and EA SPORTS senior producer. "Our aim is to deliver the highest quality player likeness and animation in the history of FIFA, and as a result players are more responsive, more dynamic and more unpredictable than ever before. This will change the way football is experienced." "Put simply, this technology makes players more like real players, giving us the ultimate performance enhancement of the player models in FIFA," Rydell added. The new Complete Control System also brings a comprehensive suite of new tools for AI opponent managers and tactics, while also adding to the visual experience of the game. The Complete Control System's gameplay tools include a new Player Control System, the Player Trajectory System and the entire suite of new positions and skills. The Player Trajectory System enables for a complete range of player movement, including highly agile positioning options such as Dribbling and an array of new AI techniques, including Aggressive and Counter Attacking tactics, and for better team tactical balance, as well as new tools to control defenders in tight situations. The new Intelligent Free Kicks system implements a new intelligent kick function that allows players to perfectly line up an intelligent free kick, in the safest place possible. And the Player Trajectory System completely redefines the space players occupy on the pitch. Player Trajectory System The new Player Trajectory System is one of the main technical advancements in FIFA 22 and one of the most significant gameplay changes from last year. To make players more realistic in the Ultimate Team mode, we're taking a groundbreaking step forward. The Player Trajectory System enables the most realistic and complete player movement on a football pitch. The Player Trajectory System uses data from real-life player movement and on-ball actions that can be analyzed in-game to provide you with the most accurate and realistic player animations on the pitch. In real-life, players don't just "run" on the pitch, they

Passing The first step to creating a successful pass is an understanding of what you want to do with the ball, which is part of the reason why our technical team gave you the ability to have three options for passing in the new Create-A-Play tool. You can send it with the run and attack it with a through ball. Or you can cross it with different types of crosses. All these options give you a great range of control over what you can pass, and how you want it to be played.
