“It’s been so exciting to work with all the leading football clubs in the UK, France, Germany, Spain and Italy, and see the fans get involved in the process,” says EA SPORTS Senior Producer Massimo Robustelli. “We have seen a significant increase in the number of players on the pitch and the intensity of the football, and the data is enabling us to deliver a more accurate and more authentic version of the real game. The improved physics and ball flight, and the natural movement of players in the HyperMotion range of technologies, will give each player the ability to master the game.” In addition to the new HyperMotion features, EA SPORTS FIFA 22 introduces “Introduction to Football,” a brand new way of delivering the game that fans will enjoy, and the best way to learn about and get into the action. “Introduction to Football” places fans in a special stadium environment during the new FIFA 22 Demo, allowing them to experience the atmosphere of the real game before they play. Players will compete with realistic crowd noise and a variety of unique on-pitch objects and players for a chance to score. The introduction to football concept will be key to introducing the new features and their additional real-world authenticity to the football community. “Introduction to Football” is a prelude to the full game and is supported by new XtraKick animations of fan-filmed demonstrations. These unique animations are incorporated into the new introduction to football feature, as well as the beautiful Opening Celebration user created cutscenes. These celebrations take the player through a personalised pre-match experience of their player moments in a game that the player can replay in a variety of situations. Massimo Robustelli, Senior Producer - FIFA, said: “We have a unique opportunity to work with clubs, coaches, players and fans to capture their footballing vision of the game. As fans of the game, all of us at EA SPORTS are passionate about football, and we’re excited to start creating a truly authentic and fantastic new gaming experience.” We caught up with Gordon Taylor, Chief Revenue Officer at Taylor Media, to find out more. What does this all mean for Taylor Media and its customers? Taylor Media is an award-winning media company, delivering specialist football content on and off the pitch.
