2. In the layers palette, switch to the Layers panel. The layers palette is where you can see all the layers, including those you've created. To create a new layer, click the New Layer button, or press Ctrl+Alt+N, on the keyboard. To lock or hide a layer, double-click it in the layers palette, or press Ctrl+0 on the keyboard. Unlocked layers appear in the layers palette. Click a locked layer's name in the layers palette to unlock it. 3. Create a new text layer to use as your title for your photo by clicking the Create New Layer button, or pressing Ctrl+Alt+N, on the keyboard, and naming the layer _title_. In this example, the name of the text layer will be **title**. 4. Create the image of the book pages by right-clicking the Background layer and choosing Merge Down from the context menu. This will combine the Background layer into the New Layer. Click OK. **Figure 9-2:** Merge layers together to create a new one. As shown in Figure 9-3, you now see two layers: a layer with your background and a text layer that will become the book title. Figure 9-3: The background layer and a text layer from the background layer. 5. To create a gradient for the title, choose Gradient from the Tools panel and click on the Create New Gradient button to the right of the Gradient tool, or press Alt+G on the keyboard. The gradient editor tool allows you to edit any color in the image and apply them to new colors. The gradient editor tool is useful in building a good looking title that doesn't repeat a color. In Figure 9-4, I have applied the standard black-to-yellow-to-black gradient from the Background layer. With Figure 9-4, the initial color gradient settings are as follows: * Start at a medium gray around 40 percent. * End at a medium gray around 45 percent.

You can adjust these color settings by clicking on the colors to set the start point of the gradient, or by changing the settings in the gradient editor toolbar, as shown in Figure 9-5. 6. Click on the button in the gradient editor toolbar to apply the gradient to the title layer. You can now see the gradient applied on the title layer

What's New in the?

The Office of the First Lady of the United States The Office of the First Lady of the United States was the official title of a chief executive position in the executive branch of the United States government from 1917 to 1977, when it was replaced by the position of First Lady. The office was established by the War Revenue Act of 1917, and initially housed in the Treasury Department. In 1921 the office moved to the Old Executive Office Building, and in 1953 to the White House. In 1977, the office was disbanded, and the office and position of First Lady once again became separate roles. 1917 to 1920 The position was created by the 1917 Revenue Act. The office of the First Lady was established by a December 2, 1917, Executive order. The inaugural officeholder was Edith Bolling Wilson. The exact title given the office, "First Lady," was established when President Wilson signed the Revenue Act of 1917, Act of December 2, 1917, ch. 63,. After the inauguration of Calvin Coolidge in March 1920, his wife Grace attempted to retain her title as First Lady, but Coolidge vetoed that bill on January 9, 1921. In 1923 she was successful in naming one of her aides, Pauline Frederick, as successor to her position. First Lady's office During the first thirty years of the 20th century, a series of official portrait photographers were employed to document the life and activities of first ladies. As it was a position created by the Revenue Act of 1917, it was not included in the first catalogue of Executive office in the White House, released in February 1918. The "official" portrait photographer was the White House photographer, John Vachon, but the portraits are not included in the White House Historical Association catalogue (Volume XI, 1912–1938). The official portrait photographer is also not listed in the official catalogue of Executive office in the White House, released in the same year. In 1919, the concurrent Appropriations Act created the Office of the First Lady of the United States, part of the Treasury Department. 1920 to 1977 1920 to 1951 1952 to 1977 On July 16, 1951, President Harry S. Truman signed an act, which made the Office of the First Lady a part of the White House. The office was led by a head of the office, or first lady, until 1977. The position was vacant in 1977, when a proposal to disband the office was made, but the
