Q: How to use the result of raster calculation in a field that defines a raster path? I want to combine a raster layer with a point layer. Therefore I need to use the calculated raster value in a field in the point layer (e.g. 10^6). The resulting raster is overlaid with the point layer that has a path. When I do it in ArcCatalog I have to choose the calculation type. So if it needs a raster, it selects that raster file (I don't want that, I want to use the result of the calculation). The problem is that when I do it programmatically (select the result of the calculation) I get this error: Error 3003: Invalid index. The selected element is not a raster.

This problem occurred in Desktop 9.1.0 and is fixed in 9.3 (see issue 11834). It appears when no raster is selected. I also get the same error when I try to define a path and assign it to a field: No spatial reference defined for path, it will not be used. I believe it has something to do with the "raster" file definition. But I would like the raster to be defined later, not in the script. Below is my code:

arcpy.env.workspace =
'C:/Users/Dennis/Desktop/Stéphane/Stéphane' arcpy.env.overwriteOutput = True mySource =
r'C:/Users/Dennis/Desktop/Stéphane/Stéphane/Study_A/Study_A.shp' myResult =
r'C:/Users/Dennis/Desktop/Stéphane/Stéphane/study_A/study_A_10^6.tif' path = arcpy.Field("Path", "OID@") path_array = path.split(';') xmin = path_array[0].split(',')[2] xmax = path_array[1].split(
