Dante's Inferno, the Gothic masterpiece from id Software and Ron Gilbert is an offbeat horror game in the style of the classic monster movies. The game brings back classic horror elements into the 3D world with an emphasis on story-telling and visuals. All of these elements are combined in Dante's Inferno to deliver a truly unique horror adventure gaming experience. You are a youthful man named Bruges, who has grown up on a farm and was raised in a normal home. As a child, your father, who worked on the farm, taught you how to use a rifle and you could control and steer a farm truck. One day, your father disappeared, leaving his only son behind on the farm. Life went on normally until one day, as a young man you would receive a phone call from your aunt in England and she informed you that your father had been killed and that you and your mother needed to leave the farm at once. Just as you drove away, a demonic-looking figure appeared out of nowhere and threw your truck into a ditch. Taking you inside, the demon gave you a blood-filled pentagram, saying that your father used it to protect him. You took the pentagram but just as you were trying to put it on your wrist, a bat-like monster called a guevara rushed in and began attacking you. The demon, who had the pentagram on his wrist, immediately vanished. Later on that night, as you were lying in bed, you heard voices in your room. As you went to investigate, you saw that the room was filled with a horde of guevara. As you tried to get away, you suddenly felt your body levitate, and you fell into a pit in your room. You woke up in another room where you saw the demonic figure. The demon grabbed a hold of you, but you were able to overpower the demon by shooting him with a gun and killing him. This was an extremely rare occurrence, as the demons normally kill the witnesses of the first killings. The next day, you headed out into the countryside where you stumbled across the farm that your father owned. As you tried to take a closer look, a brilliant light shone through and the guevara attacked you. The demon grabbed you and threw you against the ground, using his telekinetic powers, and left. Later on, you received a phone call from your Aunt Helen in England saying that your mother had died of a heart attack. You drove to her estate

Ælius (consul 449 BC) Lucius Ælius (, Marcus, a member of the Ælii of Ancient Rome, was elected consul in 449 BC, as the first of the patrician class. He and Brutus, the first plebeian consul, were both killed in the same year, by the order of Cimber and Cis Wilcox, the dictator of Athens. He was a member of a patrician family: His father Caecilius was consul in 462 and his grandfather, his great-grandfather or great uncle, his grandfather's father or great uncle or had been tribune in 459. This gives him a patrician gens name akin to the name of the more notable brothers Lucius and Gaius Ælius. Family Lucius Ælius was the son of Marcus or Marcus Aurelius Ælius (consul 462), the patrician consul of 462 BC. His gens name "Ælius" is that of the patrician gens of the Roman Senate; today all patricians in the Roman Republic have that same gens name. His father Lucius was the son of consul Caecilius (consul 459). His patrician cognomen is "Ælius", "of the House of Ælii". He married a woman whose name is unknown. According to Liber Pontificalis the daughter of his great grandfather or great uncle Lucius Ælius, a priest of Jupiter. Lucius Ælius had four sons, Marcus Aurelius, Lucius, Gaius and Pomponius, the sons of Lucius, and three daughters, Ælita, Aemilia and Atilia. This is Lucius' family tree: Lucius Ælius was a descendant of Lucius Ælius, the grandfather or great grandfather or great uncle of Lucius' great grandfather. Lucius Ælius' ancestors had participated in the First Samnite War. The entire family names is more or less connected, because if one family member separated out as a plebeian, the entire family name was transferred from the nobiles to the plebeians. According to Plutarch: Family tree (abbreviated) Marcus Aurelius Ælius (consul 462
