You can use the full version of Photoshop, however, which is $129-199 depending on which version you have. Some of the features in the professional version, such as the Liquify Filter and the transform panel are not available in the Elements version. Photoshop Elements will save time and be well worth the $40 or less in many cases. If you want to do professional work, get Photoshop or pay for the full version. A spate of fires sparked by thunderstorms scorched New York City neighborhoods Tuesday, damaging a Brooklyn bakery and a Chinese restaurant, filling a Manhattan street with flames and delaying the morning commute for hundreds of thousands of people as well as firefighters. Firefighters were also tackling a blaze that damaged a London grocery store that shares the same owner as a Long Island ice cream shop where a similar fire spread last month. (AP Photo/Richard Drew) Updated at 11:42 AM EDT on Saturday, Sep 9, 2011 A spate of firestorms that scorched New York City neighborhoods Tuesday, damaging a Brooklyn bakery and a Chinese restaurant, filling a Manhattan street with flames and delaying the morning commute for hundreds of thousands of people as well as firefighters, has one fire department ringing alarm bells. "We are sick of this crap," said Statewide District Capt. Michael Kort, spokesman for the New York State Fire Marshal's Office. "We are tired of getting calls about people throwing garbage into burning garbage cans." Flames were shooting from a bin in the corner of a Korean grocery at 1635 East Broadway in East Flatbush, Brooklyn. A NYC FDNY spokesman said the fire was "in process." At least two dozen vehicles from the FDNY were dispatched to that address and an officer was stationed there. The FDNY said the fire was in process at 1:45 PM. In Staten Island, a two-alarm fire was reported at the Staten Island Mall. Multiple calls from the mall to the fire department and multiple reports from firefighters were pouring into the TIPS hotline, but at the time the SI FDNY department did not respond to the 4 p.m. call. Tuesday's brush fires were separate from a large blaze on the same block in London, Ont., Canada, that blackened the roof of the same supermarket as the Brooklyn fire. Neighborhood resident Joshua Kane was driving into Manhattan from Brooklyn Tuesday and saw the "most beautiful thing I've ever seen in my life" – a burning trash bin on Nostrand Avenue by the Dominick's grocery store.Purification and properties of a chitosanase from Lactobacillus rhamnosus GG. Q: How to write a RegExp to match URLs? I need a RegExp to match URLs in java. I've tried using the following expression: [\w-]+://[\w-]+ Which matches for example my localhost: but it doesn't match: If i change the second part of the expression to ^http\:// then this works, so that makes me think that for some reason i can't match for the port. Why is this happening? A: Why do you need the expression at all? You can simply do: Pattern p = Pattern.compile("^http\\://(.)$"); Matcher m = p.matcher(url); if (m.matches()) {... } Note: if you don't need to support URLs containing multiple protocol types in the same location, then you can simplify the expression to: Pattern p = Pattern.compile("^http:\\/\\/(.)$"); Regex is not always the best tool to use, but if you need to validate a single input you want the above. A: I found out the answer. There is a character restriction on port numbers. I couldn't verify this though. Q: How to make apt-get update transparently use proxy? I'm setting up a proxy and when I run apt-get update from the terminal I get the following output: Ign:3 xenial InRelease Hit:4 xenial InRelease Hit:5 xenial InRelease Fetched 1,707 kB in 1s (1,162 kB/s) Reading package lists...
