UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) - The United States,

Japan and several other countries asked the United Nations Security Council on Friday for more information on North Korea's announcement that it will not "resort to force" after its sixth and most powerful nuclear test. North Korea's official KCNA news agency said on Thursday it would not use nuclear force against the United States and that it would negotiate with Washington in good faith in response to President Donald Trump's pledge to prevent

Pyongyang from developing a nuclear weapon capable of hitting the United States. “We share with the United Nations and the international community the highest concerns for the safety of the DPRK citizens and residents in the face of this most recent threat to the North Korean people,” U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Nikki Haley, the council’s president, said in a statement, referring to North Korea by its official name, the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea. “We call upon the DPRK to return to

The basic problem in the program is that the artificial preferences are rooted in fear, in a fear of what lies outside the world of fast food restaurants and multi-continent shopping malls, of drugs and debauchery. Blacks fear whites because whites wish to control the amount of blacks and precisely because of that fear they control the amount of blacks. There is nothing wrong with fear: fear of gangsters or of aliens or of dying is a natural reaction to the threats lying in the world. An artificially induced fear is no basis for a social system: it is a base upon which cowards might build a kingdom. Page 2 The very artificiality of the generation of the artificial mates has turned men from mammals into apes. For it is precisely in the question of controlling women that the ability to procreate depends - man's ability to control women is based upon the ability of a would-be heir to deceive the would-be heiress into believing that he and not his rival is the real father of the child. We accept the control of women as a characteristic of an evolutionary process: the term biology is inadequate for the great leap this process has made between the instincts of the isolated male and the artificial contrivances of the society. What man has contrived to transform
