* Photoshop CS3: This version was released in 2003; a few of the features introduced in Photoshop CS3 are not available in older versions. * Photoshop Elements: This version also introduced several new features, but it was originally designed for beginners. (Elements works on Macs, Windows, and Linux.) * Lightroom: This version is a software platform specifically for photographers. It has a simple interface, but if you don't have time to learn the menu items, it works just fine for most image-manipulation purposes. The following list shows some basic features to know and use: * The Layers panel offers seven tabs across the top, each with a different task. The Tasks panel (at the bottom) displays a toolbox and a menu (Figure 2-1) that allows you to add new layers, change layer properties, and apply special effects. A layer is like a blueprint of the image. * The Paths panel (Figure 2-2) helps you draw shapes or paths around elements in the photo, which can be used to cut or combine elements. The Selection tool works in the same way as the Paths panel. * The Basic panel contains an assortment of tools and drop-down menus (Figure 2-3). The tools and menus vary in some ways for different purposes and image-editing jobs. For example, Curves manipulates the overall brightness of the photo, and the Brush tool helps you paint special effects. * In the Info panel (Figure 2-4), a small dictionary of settings appears when you hover the cursor over an item. You can view the information or change the settings. The following figure demonstrates a few of the most common tools and panels. Photoshop CS3 (left) and Photoshop Elements 9 (right) You can see the Tasks and Basic panels in the preceding figure. Photoshop CS3 (left) and Photoshop Elements 9 (right) Here are several places to look for additional help and tutorials: * Photoshop Books: Check out the books listed in the Resources sidebar at the back of this book for helpful information. * Photoshop User Support: A web-based information center called Photoshop User Support (`www.photoshop.com/support/`) provides help for both Photoshop CS3 and Photoshop Elements 9. * Photoshop

Q: MySQL: Group by on a JOIN I want to find articles that have specific tags. These tags I get from a FK relation. Here is the set up: articles -------------------------- id title tag_list ------- id article_id tag_id tag --------------- id tag_name article_tag_map ---------------- id tag_id article_id Tag_list holds the article_id and tag_id of the tag. I tried something like SELECT articles.id, articles.title, articles.status, count(articles.id) as c FROM articles LEFT JOIN article_tag_map AS a ON a.tag_id=a.tag_list LEFT JOIN tag_list AS tl ON a.tag_list = tl.id LEFT JOIN tag AS t ON tl.tag_id = t.id WHERE a.article_id = 1 GROUP BY articles.id ORDER BY c DESC; But I can only GROUP BY articles.id. I'd like to know, which articles are in this tag. The result should be a table like this: +--------------------------+----------------------+--------+ | id | title | status| +--------------------------+----------------------+--------+ | 1 | Article 1 | 0 | | 2 | Article 2 | 0 | | 3 | Article 3 | 0 | | 4
