Metodo De Yuan Yu SupermemoriaWilliam Davis (Australian politician) William Heer Davis (6 June 1825 – 8 May 1900) was a New South Wales politician, merchant and brewer who was a member of the New South Wales Legislative Assembly for five terms between 1857 and 1886. History Davis was born in India, and was educated in England, he trained as a brewer. He came to Sydney in 1842 and took over the brewery and brewing business of William Reese, which he took in partnership. He was elected as a supporter of the conservative government of Henry Parkes at the 1857 election for the seat of Hills Shire. His political views were conservative, and as the business was doing well, he did not have to work for a living. However, his support for Parkes in the election was probably a factor in his election, as he had earlier served as a JP (Justice of the Peace) and he retained this position. He was also a strong proponent of expelling the Chinese from Sydney, eventually resigning from the Assembly after five terms. His business was successful, and he was a foundation member of the Sydney Hotel Company, which eventually owned the Sydney International Hotel, and the Café Royal and the Cambridge. He was also active in various civic and religious affairs, such as the committee of the church of St Mary-the-Virgin, North Sydney (now St Mary Star of the Sea). He was a foundation committee member of the General Hospital and as a foundation member of the Permanent Royal Commission of 1862. He was a conservative politician, and shared the views of most of the conservative faction of the time, including Henry Parkes. He was a friend and supporter of the Premier. He was not interested in Politics, but was regarded as a reliable, loyal and diligent supporter of the government of Parkes. The government and the Parkes family were very close. Parkes was the son of his first cousin William Davis, and one of his daughters married his cousin's son, Henry Parkes, Jr.. He had been a JP for many years. He
