All of this is enabled by the technological innovation of the Blockchain. With the rise of online profiles through likes, followers and friends, there has been a transition from a person's identity based on what they do, to a person's identity being derived from what they do online. These new concepts have already played a big role in the advancement of online reputation and the rise of the influencer economy. The increase in online reputation and social influence has been incentivized by a growing number of services that are using the Blockchain to give value back to those who are influential on social media or in any other online network. A blockchain based reputation system (BREX) is a nascent concept but one that could help to eliminate the lack of accountability around online identities and could even be a powerful tool to create trust and transparency around the Twitter, Youtube
