R-Studio 7.3 Build 155233 Network Edition (preactivated) RePack. r-studio serial keyBlack Friday has officially come. On the last day of the month, I took my friends out for a celebration meal at a new restaurant called Burger Joint. You can get burgers for $8 and if you add two sides and a drink they are only $10. This definitely got me to thinking about burgers. As you all know we have a regular menu of burgers and our specialty burgers including the Batali burger, Meatball burger, and the Super loco burger. But I've always wondered what are some other hot, delicious burgers you've had? Please leave your favorite burgers in the comments, I'd love to try them all! Our second Friday of 2016 will be a huge one, happy new year! I wanted to create a burger with some British beef. I think Britain gets pretty underrated. Not only does it have an awesome food history (they invented the bun and the artichoke!), but the British beef is pretty tasty! Chalked up the British beef, I was really excited to do some research on black pudding. This is a dish of English origin that is sausage-like in size, but a little heavier than regular sausages. It's packed with all sorts of great stuff like an amazing blend of oatmeal, pork and beef. This would be perfect paired with a toasted sourdough bun. Chef Adam Linker is the owner of Lohi's Market in Milwaukee. He has been a huge help to me to launch and refine the recipes for The Burger Bar. He is also one of my favorite chefs in Milwaukee. If you get a chance to visit Lohi's Market, you will easily find Chef Linker offering a variety of his amazing artisan bakery creations. Adam has been on of my most frequent Twitter chit-chat partners, helping me refine the Burger Bar as we go. He and I have been kicking around the idea of collaborations with our respective craft beers as well. This is the first of many collaborations we've planned for the coming year
