

A: The 3rd party links on this page and the link that you shared are known to be malicious. I would advise you to not click on those links and get this virus instead. You can get a virus just by clicking those links. It will infect your computer. Try to know the source of the link and whether it's trustworthy or not: The link that you shared: this is a link that Google search returned, that's why it's included on the first page of google search result: Open this link in your web browser. You'll get redirected to a different site (in this case mediafire.com) by this link. Open any mediafire link in your web browser. Mediafire is a fake file hosting site. You'll get redirected to by this link. Authenticating yourself or giving any information to fake websites is not safe. According to this Stack Exchange post, you can verify whether these are safe or not by downloading a sample file and checking whether it's legit. For mediafire, the file is of size 184.14 MB and is legit. In this case, if the file is corrupt, you won't be able to download anything from mediafire, therefore it's not a problem. The link that you shared is a download of Refx Nexus 2.2 Crack: The file is of size 25.59 MB, so if the file is corrupted, you won't be able to download anything from mediafire, therefore it's not a problem. If you found that the file is legit, continue with the download. Note that in general, the website mediafire.com and the website mediafire.net are the same. However, the website mediafire.com doesn't have any risk of you getting a virus. The site mediafire.com is hosting legit files. You can download the files from that website. If you continue to download the file, you are
